The Three Fronts

The body, the land, the spirit — and what the judgments forbid

FOURTH PART

The Three Fronts of War

The timeless entity does not always strike head-on. It has three fronts. It attacks the body, the land, and the spirit. And on each of these fronts, it practices sacrifice. Not the sacrifice one sees, the sacrifice one no longer notices because it has become normal. Because it is called progress. Because it is called necessity. Because it is called —

THE BODY

The body is systematically poisoned. Chlorinated water — chlorates, perchlorates —, fluoride, aluminium in infant formula, cadmium in soils, endocrine disruptors, GMOs, pesticides. Fertility is collapsing. In Quebec, the count is 1.33 children per woman in 2024. Chronic diseases are exploding. This is not an accident. It is a slow war against the living. One does not kill with swords. One kills with additives. One kills with bills. One kills with stress called "productivity." One kills with screens called "education —"

The institution sacrifices bodies on the altar of the economy. It calls that progress. It calls that growth. But look: growth of what? Of debt. Of disease. Of sterility. The young will no longer be able to have children, and they will say it is their choice. It is not their choice. It is the poison they were made to swallow while being told it was drinking water. It is the void they were made to believe —

The body is the first occupied territory. Even before the land, it is the body that is colonized. It is taught to be silent. It is taught to obey. It is taught to present itself sick before doctors who do not see it, to present itself tired before bosses who do not care, to present itself sad before psychologists who prescribe pills. The body becomes a problem to manage. A commodity to maintain. A debt toward health —

I, I refuse this sacrifice. I do not place my body on the altar of the machine. I do not give it as hostage to industry. I nourish it with earth. I drink from the river. I lay it under the stars. I respect it as a sovereign territory. Because that is what the body is: a territory. The first. The last. The only one that cannot be ceded without —

THE LAND

The land is occupied without treaty. No cession treaty south of the 49th parallel in Quebec. The Plan Nord, James Bay, the dams, the mines, the data centres that pump water by the millions of litres — all of this rests on disguised terra nullius. The boreal forest is torn apart. Water is plundered. The living is treated as an obstacle to —

They say these lands belong to Quebec, to Canada. But by what right? By what right, they say. Still that word. I say: by what violence. By what cunning. By what occupation. The Proclamation of 1763 said that only lands ceded by treaty may be occupied. There were no treaties. So the occupation is not a law. It is an absence of law. A void dressed in authority. A theft called —

The timeless entity takes the land as one takes a breath. It does not ask. It registers. It divides. It sells. It mortgages. It transforms relationship into property. The land is not property. The land is a mother. One does not possess one's mother. One respects her. One tends to her. One gives back to her. One offers to her. One does not take from —

But the system takes. It takes because that is its nature. It takes because it is a timeless entity that mutates to adapt and take. Today it is a mine. Tomorrow it is a data centre. The day after tomorrow it is a carbon capture zone. Always the same taking. Always the same theft. Always the same sacrifice of the living on the altar of —

THE SPIRIT

The spirit is colonized by school — that ideological State apparatus Althusser described —, by concentrated media — Quebecor, Power Corporation, the manufacturing of consent —, by politics-as-spectacle — interchangeable faces of the same system. Dissidence is channelled: surface criticism is authorized to avoid fundamental rupture. Scapegoats are burned to save the —

School does not format to think. It formats to obey. It teaches the dates of battles but not the names of violated treaties. It teaches geometry but not the geography of uncaded lands. It teaches law but not the difference between the sea and the land. It produces citizens, not living beings. Taxpayers, not responsible ones. Employees, not creators. Consumers, not —

The media manufacture fear, then sell security. They manufacture need, then sell the product. They manufacture the enemy, then sell protection. It is the same mycelium. It mutates. Today it is a newspaper, tomorrow it is a social network. But the venom is the same: to make believe that without the institution, we would be lost. When it is the institution that loses us. That robs us. That —

The spirit is the last front. Because if the body resists, it is drugged. If the land resists, it is imprisoned. But if the spirit resists, everything collapses. That is why the timeless entity devotes so much energy to it. It colonizes the spirit from childhood. It tells it: you are small. You are weak. You need us. Without us, the dark. Without us, the cold. Without us, the —

I no longer believe these tales. I know that chaos is them. I know that the dark is their absence of light. I know that the cold is their absence of warmth. I know that true light comes from breath. I know that true warmth comes from relationship. I know that true order comes from the earth, not from the —

*For the honour of future generations
In the dignity of the past,
the pride of reconstituting oneself,
in recognizing what we are committed to.
In recognizing the accumulated wrongs and errors.
In re-establishing forgotten truths!
Theft, usurpation, erasure have been perpetrated.
Peoples have been massacred.
Rights imposed to enslave,
attach to doctrines of the dead,
named privileges and they are scattered.
A front-row ticket for those being made to abdicate having to be represented.
For they have forgotten what Liberty means.
The true one, the only one, that of the —
The withdrawal of consent as an act,
not as posture.
as end, as choosing one's destiny.
Taking oneself in hand!
I can only show that there is a shore,
that there is another side,
that there are two canoes
and a river
that wait, for those who will choose to cease being mere indolence.
Two canoes. Two peoples. One river.
I have chosen to stop, to get off the ship,
to climb into a birch-bark canoe.*

*The Wampum has never been broken,
it waits for us to finally choose the right path.
It is time to —
I have chosen silence. Vigilance. Withdrawal.
This is not without effects!
One must be ready to assume them.
When others will understand what it means to Abandon, to Cease feeding, to Find oneself again!
We will move toward a future of prosperity.
A legacy to deliver for post-heritage.
Peace reigns when one ceases to kneel.
this must be done in community,
not in isolation —
Soon they will have erased us.
Genocided our entity of goodness before it could inhabit us.
replaced by a world, vile, empty, artificial!
Where love, life will no longer have their place.
Only empty entities, plugged in, conditioned to repeat..
The end of —
The tools are there,
speech,
memory,
resistance,
the bond to the territory.
As long as these bonds are lived, the world of ignominy can only —*

WHAT THE JUDGMENTS ADD TO THESE FRONTS

I say that the institution poisons the body, plunders the land, and colonizes the spirit. The judgments, for their part, show that even their own rules forbid what they —

In 1967, Afroyim v. Rusk (387 U.S. 253) declared that citizen sovereignty is inalienable. It cannot be taken from me. But the reverse is true: I can repudiate it. What is inalienable belongs to the person, not to the State. When I choose to no longer be a citizen, I do not abandon a debt. I recover a —

In 1969, Shapiro v. Thompson (394 U.S. 618) and Chicago Motor Coach v. Chicago established the right to travel freely. Not to circulate according to rules. Freely. Travel is a freedom, not a privilege. When I walk upon these lands without permission, I do not transgress. I come home, upon lands that have never been ceded, never sold, never —

In 1871, Miller v. US said that to claim and exercise a constitutional freedom cannot be converted into a crime. When I live according to my conscience, when I withdraw my consent, when I cease to pay, when I cease to bend, I do not aggravate an offense. I exercise a freedom that crime cannot —

In 1886, Boyd v. US (116 U.S. 616) wrote: to force a man to produce evidence against himself is to violate him. The SIN, tax, the register: it is forcing me to produce the evidence of my own enslavement. It is forcing me to participate in my own cage. The law knows this. It does it anyway. But it —

And in 1886, Yick Wo v. Hopkins (118 U.S. 356) confirmed that the Fourteenth Amendment protects persons. Not corporations. The distinction is there, in stone. The living on one side. The fiction on the —

I do not cite these judgments to ask them for permission to live. I cite them to show other living beings that even the grimoires of the sea admit, in their moments of lucidity, that the ship is a construction. And that a construction cannot command the —
